"Return to Principles of Early Forefathers" Cate Tells Ad Club

Cook Academy Headmaster gives food for thought at luncheon in American House—Is presented by I. R. Gladstone—Night meeting November 30 in charge of R. S. Brown.

Bert C. Cate, headmaster of Cook Academy, Montour Falls, told Advertising Club members of their responsibilities as American citizens based on their heritages from their forefathers. The talk was given at a meeting held Wednesday noon in the American House. This was the largest meeting this year.

Ray S. Brown, was song leader, President Milton Crane presided and the opening prayer was by the Rev. Nicholas Cossaboon and the Rev. Russell O. Kirsch gave the benediction. The next meeting, November 30, will be an evening meeting in the Presbyterian Church with Mr. Brown as program chairman.

Arthur C. Baggerly, charter member of the club, was present and reminisced a bit. He was a guest of M. G. Hubbs.

Principal Irving R. Gladstone, program chairman, presented Mr. Cate who spoke in part as follows: "People in general seem to be living longer and happier lives than formerly. We are reaping the harvest our forefathers planted. They laid the foundation upon which we are building. One of these was Freedom of Speech. Next is Freedom of Religion. Many of us do not realize the importance of this, that we can meet any time, any place for social, religious or political reasons. A friend returning from Germany told of having to get permission to have a farewell party with more than four people present.

"Another foundation is that of personality development. Here with push and an element of luck any boy born on a vicinity farm can become president. There is no top, politically, religiously or socially which a boy here cannot aspire to.

"Freedom of thought promotes invention and culture. Europeans say we have no culture, but five of the eight prizes at an international art exhibit have been won by Americans drawing inspiration from what is about them rather than copying. When we are 300 years old we will have, and today have a better culture than many countries much older.

"Love of country is a foundation dug out by Americans with their hands. This country is ours because we made it and did not inherit it. Pride in our home, schools, churches and community and in a better country are our heritage. There is something spiritual as well as mental and physical in our patriotism. It is a type not seen anywhere else.

"Our responsibilities are not only to protect what we have received but to pass it on to a little finer. We must preserve Democracy. We must preserve Christianity for it is the foundation of Democracy. Christianity is not for honor but for service and not for wealth but finer living.

"We must preserve the home. What does a home mean in Germany where a boy's destiny is to fight and a girl's to raise children to fight. In Russia children are taken from parents and put on farms such as we put cows to pasture. In Italy boys are given guns when they are big enough to hold them when they should be studying. Man exists for the state in those places while here the unit of government is the home.

"We must preserve schools unhampered by restraints and develop the cultural side of life and teach love of mankind as a whole. Teach that our country is part of a world nation.

"The fourth responsibility is personal responsibility. To be thankful for friends, for the food on our tables, thankful for the vineyards our fathers founded for us and from which we are reaping the harvest."

Attorney Crane on Bar Association Committee

Attorney Charles L. Crane of this village, past president of the Steuben County Bar Association has been appointed a member of that organization's committee to confer with Board of Supervisors relative to changing the jury picking system of Steuben County, which has been severely criticized in the past few weeks. The criticism came as the result of picking 450 jurors before 13 could be secured for the Wheelock trial in Hornell. Many of the jurors had moved, others had died, some were beyond the age limit, others were feeble and many other causes were found which prevent men and women from serving. The County Supervisors were severely censured by the presiding justice at the trial as a result there is talk of employing a jury commissioner to examine the eligibility of prospective jurors.

Reflector Rates "A" at State Press Meet

Reflector staff members are elated over the "A" rating received at the Syracuse Scholastic Press Convention in Syracuse last week. There were only 20 mimeographed papers in the whole state which placed in the contest at all. Awards went to papers in the printed class as well. Miss Ida Hawell, faculty advisor for the school paper was champion for the group with Mrs. Willis Colburn and Mr. Pawling the last named driving cars to take the students.

Those who went in addition to those named were Frances Colburn and Ruth Sherwood, co-editors of the publication, Gloria Vona, Elaine Pawling, Dorothea Jones and Warren Perkins.

The conference is sponsored by the Syracuse University Department of Journalism under the direction of Dean Lyle Spencer. The rating for the Reflector is higher than last year, which denotes an improvement.

ARMISTICE SIREN

The fire siren will blow one long blast at 11 o'clock Saturday morning at which time people of the village are asked to observe two minutes of silent prayer for the war dead of American wars and also say a prayer for peace. When the siren blows at that time, people are asked to refrain from any unnecessary work for the duration of two minutes.

Erie Crossing Being Repaired

The long awaited repairs on the Main Street Erie railroad crossing are being undertaken. The approach to the crossing has been and is being repaired by the State Highway department who have charge of the approaches.

About 30 men came into the village Saturday and ripped up the crossing and plan to level it. It is understood they planned to make the improvement last year but held up pending the building of the new Main Street bridge over the Catskill and changing the approaches to the bridge.

The crossing was blocked off Wednesday night and traffic was detoured through Wall street.

Eugene Albee, Last of Civil War Vets, Died

This community lost its last Civil War veteran when Eugene Albee, 91, passed to his reward at his home on South Street. Mr. Albee although possessed of robust health through the major part of his great span of years had been gradually failing and the infirmities of old age finally ended a life that had been gracious and useful as well as long.

LAST CIVIL WAR VETERAN LAID TO REST

With Mr. Albee's death this community loses practically its last link with the pioneer days, for in youth the veteran had worked with men whose names have long been history, men whose lifework was instrumental in carving this village over the narrow gauge line and much of the surrounding farm land from the wilderness which once hugged both sides of the Catskill River from its source to its mouth. He remembered the many tanneries which were located in Addison and vicinity. He was undoubtedly the last man to drive a team over the old plank road which stretched like a long, broad wood walk over the hill from Addison to Elkland. A skilled carpenter, he built the bridges over which the first trains moved over the Goodyear Railroad into Addison—the narrow gauge line which later became the B & S and later still the E & O.

Eugene Albee was born in the town of Tuscarora, Jan. 30, 1848. His parents were the late Lewis R. and Marie Dayton Albee. He lived throughout most of his life in this vicinity. At an early age he attended the little school in the district for a short time.

When he became 10 years of age, his parents were both dead and he lived with neighbors, doing chores about the farm in Tuscarora. At 13 years of age he took a man's place in driving cattle from this vicinity to Philadelphia for sales.

Mr. Albee went to Oswego when 15 years of age and owing to his splendid physical condition he entered Company F of the 189th New

Armistice Day Becomes of Age

Armistice Day becomes of age Saturday. It reaches its majority of 21 years, for it was 21 years ago on November 11, 1918 that General Foch, generalissimo of the Allied Army met the German delegation in a sleeping car in France and there in the early hours of the morning, all signed the terms of what was then an armistice for peace. It was not a declaration of peace, not a meeting of conquer and conquered as in wars past, but just a group to sign an armistice for peace and the cessation of war hostilities.

What came after in the peace negotiations is now history and the repercussions of those peace meetings are being felt throughout the world today.

For 21 years after the armistice the world is at war. There is a new alignment of power, but it is an alignment that it carried to a conclusion will entirely change the geography of that continent and many others where European powers have colonies.

When youth reaches 21 years of age he is ready to face the life before him. This cannot be said of the armistice, for the world is in more chaotic condition today than at the time of that temporary signing of peace. And armistice does mean temporary and that peace was only temporary in the life span of Mother Earth.

Americans will celebrate by speeches, parades, two minutes of silence at 11 o'clock and other functions. In Europe, no one knows what will happen with millions of troops

Michael Brennan, Democrat, of Tuscarora, was defeated by Leon Andrews, Republican by the narrow margin of two votes. Fred H. Youngs, Republican, was elected in Lindley. BUTTERED BREAD

In the New York milk shed labor troubles have been making the headlines. What an observer on the spot terms a "radical organization", has been seeking to organize producers. Though it has met with relatively small success, it has apparently not hesitated to use violence and coercion on occasion.

Worse than that, it has widely attacked the farmer-owned, farmer controlled marketing cooperative organizations which serve the milk shed. And, whatever merits the organization may have, that, as thinking farmers are coming to realize, is a major sin against agriculture. Nothing has done more to advance the interests of the farmer than sound selling cooperation.

This doesn't mean that all marketing co-ops are 100 per cent perfect. They, like all other institutions, may make mistakes. They may adopt foolish policies. But the cure for that lies in the hands of the men who run them—not in dissolving them.

Going by recent reports, the "radicals" in the milk shed seem to be running out of followers. And that is to be expected—the typical American farmer is a sensible man who knows on what to ride his bread is buttered.

Some 16,000 men who handle milk in the metropolitan area have been given wage increases in a new pact signed for all distribution hands. Wage increases will be from two to eleven dollars a week, while shorter hours will accompany the increases in some instances. Teamsters and drivers distributing milk in New York and its environs will now get wages averaging about $52 a week. It is expected the increases will be met by boosting the retail price of milk from one-quarter to one-third of a cent a quart.

Thus, without any apparent opposition or fanfare the consumers of New York will absorb an increase of about fifteen cents a hundredweight in their milk. How different is the picture than that presented when the milk producers endeavored to get a living price for the product of their dairies?

In the first place the teamsters are getting more than $200 a month for their labor. How much is the farmer getting for his labor in producing that milk? Well too many of them are not getting nearly $200 a month for their milk, and what they get must be cut into by cost of feed, labor in producing the milk besides the interest on their capital investment and depreciation of their farm and machinery. As a matter of fact one of the primary reasons the milk producers do not get a price for their milk commensurate with the cost of production is due to the enormous cost of handling the milk from farm to user.

Some day the farmers will wake up to the fact they must themselves control the amount of milk they put upon the market so that a fair proportion of the price the consumer pays will reach their pockets. Until they do they will continue to be the slaves of the many organized laborers who handle the milk, take big wages for themselves and let the farmer have what is left.

DIRECT AND FAIR WARNING

The last frank warning which Ambassador Grew gave the Japanese government and people that Japan's policies and tactics in China enjoy no favor in this well informed country was indirect, and the text of it was withheld from publication by the American Embassy. Now Mr. Grew has carried his frankness a great deal farther. He has gone directly to Admiral Nomura, the Foreign Minister, who is said to hold office because of his wide range of American friendships, and has told him that, unless Japan mends her ways in China, there will be no new treaty to restrict American freedom of action and to guarantee Japan the trade rights and privileges of "the most favored nation", and there may be punitive economic discrimination against her.

This is not a threat, as Mr. Grew probably made clear to Admiral Nomura, but simply a report to him of what is common knowledge in Washington. This is that whether economic reprisals against Japan are justified or not, whether such action would be wise or unwise, the public sentiment in favor of them is so strongly reflected in both houses of Congress that no new treaty which would stand in the way of sanctions would be ratified; while the expiration of the present treaty in January is certain to be the signal for a vehement clamor for sanctions against Japan.

That the government of Japan can do anything about it which will satisfy this country's public opinion is extremely doubtful. She is going to try hard to improve appearances, because her only halfway satisfactory substitute for America as a source of war materials is the Soviet Union. While that completely unmoral regime might make a yeoman effort to furnish Japan the means to go on with the war in China, if the price were right the price would certainly be a surrender to Russia of Japan's discretion in her foreign relations.

Yet such a fundamental change of policy on the mainland as would satisfy America's too well informed public opinion would mean discrediting the Japanese Army, which would certainly invite revolution. So a strenuous effort is going to be made to improve the appearance of this "China incident", first by ameliorating the living and trading conditions of the Americans there, and then by setting up what looks like a new Chinese government over the territories occupied. Whether such window dressing is going to placate American opinion any better than it did in Manchuria, and whether the Japanese Army is going to hold its monopolistic long enough in check to do Japan any good in Washington—as it did not do in Manchuria—is extremely doubtful.

It looks, indeed, as though Japanese-American relations are going to get a lot worse before they start improving.—N. Y. Herald-Tribune.

After Repeal—Sane Thinking, or War?

Congress has finally passed the Act repealing the embargo on sale of arms and munitions to combatant nations. The President has signed the bill and now instruments of war are being sped into the cockpit of Europe to kill and maim our fellow human beings. Yet the crux of opposition to repeal of the embargo act was not nearly so much inspired by humanitarian thoughts for other people, as it was by the belief that changing the law would lead our people into another and fatal dive into that boiling caldron of European Power Politics.

Millions of Americans wrote to their Congressmen begging that the embargo be retained. Doubtless a large majority of those who wrote were inspired by the fear that repeal would inevitably lead us into war. In spite of this widespread public demand upon Congress to retain the embargo both Houses voted for repeal. In the Senate the vote was made preponderantly strong for the President's demand by the large majority of Democratic Senators. In the Lower House, however, a large group of Republican Representatives cast their votes for repeal and thus killed all chance their colleagues in the opposition group had of killing the measure. Among the Republican legislators who refused to stick with their party were two western New Yorkers, Congressmen Wadsworth and Cole.

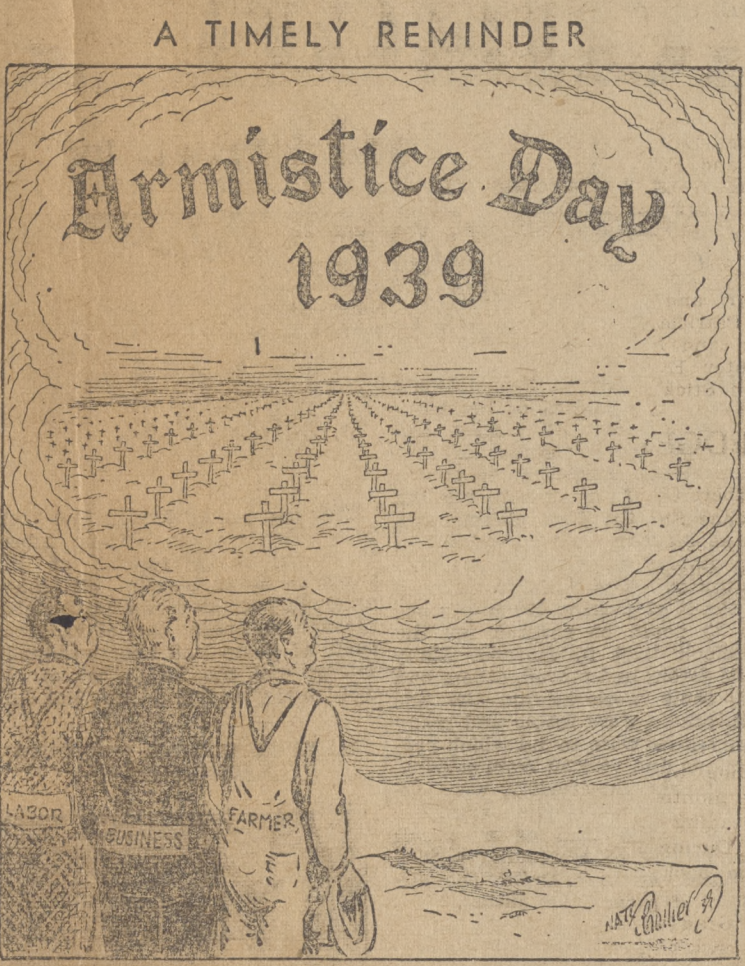

What will be the immediate effect of repeal? Only time can truly answer that question. The allied powers are certainly cheered by the news that planes from huge American plants may be able to swell their air squadrons to the tune of nearly a thousand a month. There is corresponding disgust in the mind of Hitler, and this disgust may be transmitted into acts which could conceivably lead us into war. For one thing Hitler will try to prevent the large shipment of planes reaching Europe, and what form his methods of prevention take will determine our own future course in great degree.

Fortunately Congress in repealing the embargo act forbade our vessels, carrying goods to war zones and provided that all purchases of munitions should be for cash. But France and Britain want to get these planes and to transport them across the ocean will tax shipping bottoms severely. Germany will doubtless exert every effort through raiding ships, submarines and fighting planes to intercept the planes; a possibility which has led to the speculation that Britain may attempt to fly the purchases home. Major George Fielding Elliot sees a potential danger to us in such a venture. In an article in the New York Tribune the Major points to the large air base Britain has made on the Island of Newfoundland, from whence the Allies may plan to start sending new planes to Europe. He thinks it possible this unfortified base might be captured by a German pocket battleship and troop ship, giving Hitler a temporary point from which to launch raiding aircraft against Canadian munition plants.

This seems a rather far-fetched supposition, but it does bring us face to face with the question of what our own attitude would be in event the occasion arose. Clearly the Monroe Doctrine would be violated by such a German attack, and almost as certainly we would find ourselves plunged into this war.

There has been much loose talk during discussion of the repeal session about our returning to "real" neutrality. Comparisons have been made with the position of the peninsular countries in trading with both sides during the last war and still remaining neutral. Yet we have never heard anyone tell the reason the position of Norway and Sweden cannot be compared with our position. In the last war Germany controlled the Baltic and Britain controlled the North Sea. Hence the peninsular nations were able to trade with either side without taking contraband of war intended for one nation into waters patrolled by surface vessels determined to stop the shipments.

Now that repeal is accomplished it is up to us Americans to steel ourselves against the influence of propaganda sure to endeavor the enlistment of our sympathies with the side using our weapons.

"TOSSEING on a few shovelful" is the common way of refueling a furnace, but it is not the proper way, nor is it the way to obtain the most economical heat. Try this method next time you find it necessary to refuel.

First, shake the fuel bed gently, until you can see the first red glow through the grates. Then take a shovel, or hoe, and pull it mound of live coals to the front of your furnace fire-box, just inside the fire door. Do not disturb the layer of ash under the live coals.

Now you have a fire bed sloping downward, from the lower edge of the fire door, toward the back of your furnace.

Into the hollow formed by this slope, put the fresh charge of coal—shoveling it carefully toward the back of the furnace, leaving a mound of live coals in front near the grate. These live coals in front will ignite the gases arising from the contact of the fresh coal with the hot coal, and will cause them to burn without odor.

Next remove the ashes from the ashpit, and reset the dampers: The Turn Damper in the smoke pipe should be as nearly closed as possible; the Check Damper should be closed; the Ashpit Damper should be open. It is also advisable to open the slide in the fire-door slightly—about the width of a wooden match stick. (2)

Nicknamed For Neckwear

Stiff leather stocks once made the U. S. Marines hold their heads erect in the approved military manner. They added much to the smart appearance of the uniform, but nothing to the comfort of the wearer.

It is from these stocks that the sea soldiers have won the nickname "Leatherneck", a term which has been applied to them longer than the oldest marine can remember and is still popular today, although the leather stocks were discarded about sixty years ago.

As far back as 1793 the black leather stocks were in vogue, and for a while they were supplemented by another bit of leather which was sewn to the brim on the rear of all hats. The leather was added as a protection from the powdered cues worn by the sea soldiers of that period.

These shields, which protected the uniform against the smearing effect of a powdered pigtail brushing across the shoulder blades, disappeared within a few years, but the leather stocks remained until about 1830, when they were abandoned. Reports indicate that the marines were not sorry to see them disappear.

LOOKING FORWARD

"Detailing" of Lieutenant-Colonel Philip Fleming, United States Army, as Administrator of the Wage-Hours Act directs attention to the growing tendency recently of President Roosevelt to name military and naval officers to posts traditionally held by civilians.

For instance, not so long ago the President even went into the army to get a secretary, naming his military aide, Brig.-Gen. Edwin M. Watson, to the trio presiding over the White House offices. Then there was the appointment of Admiral William D. Leahy, United States Navy, re-appointed, as Governor of Puerto Rico.

Of course, the best known of such appointments was Colonel F. C. H. Harrington, United States Army, as Administrator of the W. P. A. But there are others. The President named Rear-Admiral Christian Joynt, United States Navy, to be Director of the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department.

Heads Maritime Commission and Rear-Admiral Emory S. Land, United States Navy, retired, is chairman of the recently created United States Maritime Commission and Rear-Admiral H. A. Wiley, United States Navy, retired, is a member of that commission. The Maritime Commission has jurisdiction over this country's commercial shipping, not over any of the armed services.

These were revealed by a quick glance at the directory of government officials in civilian department and agencies. It is not an all-inclusive list—nor does it take into consideration army and navy officers in subordinate positions, such as Lieutenant-Colonel Breton Somerville, W. P. A. Administrator for New York.

Of all these appointments only those of Admirals Land and Wiley seem in harmony with American tradition. This country always has been a peace-loving nation. It has abhorred the military spirit and it always has kept the army and navy under curbs. For instance, it is traditional that a civilian should always head our War and Navy Departments.

Given to "Crack-Down"

This is not because of any deficiency in our army and navy officers. Most of them are outstanding men. Those listed above are men of ability and character. But they have been trained to be army and navy officers—they have been imbued with a militaristic spirit—they are exponents of "crack-down." Down through the years our people generally have believed for these reasons that militarism should not be placed in charge of civilian functions.

President Roosevelt, on the other hand, always has been military and naval minded. He likes army and navy officers—not only because, as some say, they take orders—but because the Presidential mind runs in that direction. He likes autocratic authority, regimentation and planned economy. He has, on occasion, been sympathetic with proposals for universal conscription. Ever since he has been President the Navy Department has been his pet. He likes to run it—even now leaving it without a Secretary of Navy, so he can hold that portfolio himself.

So it is not unnatural that when a vacancy in a civilian agency occurs the President thinks of military or naval men to fill it. On his behalf it is said he has named army and naval officers because he thinks them best qualified for the job at hand. But that is quite a reflection on our civilian population, saying, in effect, that there is not a civilian in the country qualified to be W. P. A. Administrator or Administrator of the Wages and Hours Act.

Labor Becomes Uneasy

The "detailing" of an army officer to administer the Hours and Wages Act, has caused some uneasiness in the ranks of labor. Organized labor always has been suspicious of the militarists. Its leaders do not like iron-fisted and "crack-down" tactics and then, they never know when the army may be used against their followers.

Labor is not the only group with misgivings about the Fleming move. Industry, too, is disturbed because of the general war background and the many plans which the Government has for regimenting the country in event of war. Some wonder whether the naming of Colonel Fleming is part of an elaborate plan for placing the country on a war basis, under the direction of army officers.

At all events, the placing of two major Federal agencies—the Hours and Wages Administration and W. P. A.—under the direction of army officers seems to be nothing to cheer about. It is a situation which should be watched closely by the people and Congress.

Apart from an air of dignity they may have given the smartly-dressed sea soldier, it is evident that they were never popular with the men in ranks. They are described by the men who wore them as "made of very heavy leather about three inches in height, and going around the neck to be fastened by a strap at the back." One marine added the caustic comment: "A man so arrayed could see only the moon or the sun."

AHS Home Making Department Observes 25th Anniversary

Former Domestic Department established in Curtis Square School becomes grown up and modern in home-making—Girls learn much more than merely cooking and sewing—Instructors during the past twenty-five years.

From Domestic Science to Home Economics marks the transition in the department bearing that name in the Addison High School and from the cooking of simple dishes and the sewing of simple things has evolved the entire problem of home management. Such marks the 25 years of the home economics department in the school.

It was 25 years ago Friday, November 10, that the domestic science department in high school was established. At that time the infant department, and little room in the old school building at Curtis Square. In fact a partition between two cloak rooms was set aside for the 35 girls who formed the members of that first class.

The idea of the department was conceived in necessity for it was realized that the young women of this vicinity were future home makers and hence had to be given some of the rudiments of the work they were expected to perform about the home. The school authorities realizing there is a right and wrong method of doing things, created the department to help the girls do things the right way and to enable them to help improve their home surroundings.

First Teacher

Miss Elizabeth Doran was the first teacher in domestic science. And a writer at that time predicted that the department would be one of the most successful in high school and judging from the ever increasing classes and curricula of a study this forecast can well be understood.

Rudiments Only

At first the girls were taught some of the simple principles of cooking, the use of a sewing machine, various stitches used for hand work and how to make them and gradually led up to the making of aprons, iron and pot holders, simple dresses and the making of hand sewn articles to be used about the home.

In cooking the girls learned the uses of measuring equipment, the uses of various types of cooking equipment and the making of simple recipes, bread and cakes, puddings and the like.

The girls were also taught some of the rudiment of first aid about the home, what to do for burns, cuts and other minor injuries. There were no text books in the course offered, each girl keeping a note book of her work. The book used for first aid was the Red Cross book of first aid.

Many girls have graduated from the courses offered through the years and have improved their knowledge of the art of home making, the largest business in the world. With the rudiments learned in high school many have gone on to become teachers of others and many have become home makers and given to their families the benefits of their training in the Addison High School.

Department Changes

Throughout that time many changes have been made in the department to keep pace with progress being made in home management and development. Color has been added to the kitchen, more modern sewing machines are being used, girls are learning the uses of electricity in the home, uses of gas appliances, principles of clothing color, texture and design never thought of in the beginning. In foods they learn in addition to measurement, the values of foods for various body building functions, the types of food for various members of the family under varying conditions of living, the care and feeding of babies, the arrangements of furniture, the uses of color and textures of furniture coverings, the care of the sick, and many other phases of home management too numerous to mention. And, speaking of home management, they learn the values of proper buying and the keeping of budgets. The girls also learn some of the problems involved in family relationships which stand them in good stead.

The Board of Education members in office, who originated the original domestic science department could not see the far reaching results of their institution of the course, but tribute must be paid to them for their practicality and vision in creating the course. Those men were J. S. Harrison, George H. Weatherby, Charles Park, Arthur P. Hill, Cornelius O'Connor, Fred C. Taber, Franklin D. Wade, Dr. A. A. Aldrich and Jerome C. Husted.

Ten teachers have undertaken the teaching of this work since its inception in the local school. In addition to teaching home economics some of them have also had to teach music, or drawing, and in one case both, design, and in one case an academic subject.

Two periods during that time the work was dropped for reasons best known to the board.

Teachers

A list of the teachers who have taught this course and the years of their administration are: Miss Elizabeth Doran 1914 and 15 with a skip from 1915 to 1916. Miss Doran again took up the work in 1918 and the following school year from September 1917 to 1918 there was no course in this work. It is believed the European War and America's entry into that had some effect on this for most girls were knitting or sewing Red Cross articles for the soldiers.

The course was resumed in September 1918 with Miss Nora V. Lane of Mechanics Institute as teacher. The following year, September 1919 to June 1921 Miss Edna M. Doolittle was the teacher for two years. She was followed in September 1921 by Miss Gertrude O'Connor, now married and living in Hornell.

Miss Lesley Green remained one year, Miss Madeline Heinle, of Elmira remained a year and then Miss Helen Crane, Cornell graduate became head of the home making department in September 1926 and remained on the faculty for a period of nine years, closing her administration in June 1935 after she became Mrs. Norman Phelps, Jr.

Mrs. Phelps was succeeded by Miss Bethel Caster of Cornell and a resident of Ithaca. She remained here two years and in turn was followed by Miss Hazel Pierce, also a resident of Ithaca and a graduate of Cornell University. The present teacher is Miss Phyllis Harley, a resident of Buffalo and graduate of Buffalo State Teachers College.

Today the girls may be seen from time to time visiting home to see how various activities are conducted, interviewing mothers of babies to learn something of child care and child psychology, they may be observed in stores talking with clerks and manager as to the relative values of foods and visiting industrial plants turning out products made for home consumption and use. Today there is a broad knowledge and much tribute must be paid to the Addison Board of Education for making this course possible, to the members of the faculty who have taught the work for their inspiration and inculcating the ideas in home economics for their desire to learn about home and its activities so that they will become better home makers for the future.

These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorders of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes. If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feet weak, nervous, all played out. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

Editor Receives Letter

On Life in Bermuda

"A number of recent letters from American friends have given me the impression that a widespread misconception exists in the United States regarding conditions in Bermuda. As a member of the American Colony here, may I be granted a little of your space to give a true picture of present-day life in these islands?"

"Rumor notwithstanding there is little evidence of military activity here. During daily trips about the islands, I have not seen a single trench or a strand of barbed wire. Nor have I been plagued by motor cars, which certain papers insinuate are racing along Bermuda's roads. The Colonial Parliament did relax its ban on autos to allow the Governor General use of a few cars during the war period, but these vehicles can hardly be considered a traffic nuisance. There is no food shortage, and visitors are just as welcome as ever."

"Many of the Americans now in Bermuda to spend the fall and winter have told me that they appreciate the leisurely pace of Bermuda more than ever before, and with our dollars in their present favorable exchange position, British goods can now be bought in Bermuda at bargain prices."

"Two prominent Londoners arrived here by airplane last week, after a 7000-mile flight from southern France. Shortly afterward they stated, 'At last we have found peace.'"

Congratulations to the Erie Railroad for repairing the Main Street crossing. A dangerous condition has existed there. Funny thing about that crossing, but the Boss had an editorial all in type about the abominable condition, and they pulled a fast one before we went to press and the editorial had to be scrapped.

Election is over and now we get ready to observe one or the other of the Thanksgiving Days. I guess I'll go along with the rest of the state and celebrate November 23.

Then comes Christmas. Noticed some bundles the other day in the house and on inquiry was told not to ask too many questions, as they are Christmas presents. Do your Christmas shopping early.

It is hard for us to say appropriate things in memory of our dead. During the past week Addison lost one of its most venerable citizens. I often looked at Eugene Albee and realized that he took part in the Civil War which united the nation and realized that he had seen over half of the span of United States History, about which I could only read. He could tell of events which were history making and in which he took a small part. America is fast becoming of age and losing its contacts with its past. There are only about 3400 of the Grand Army veterans left.

Did you shovel your snow Sunday? Remember that they had seven inches in Central New York and many cars were marooned in snow drifts along main traveled highways, so things in this vicinity are not so bad.

Some thoughts on Armistice Day as expressed in the writings of others.

He has not died though still he lies in poppy fields in Flanders; His soul sings on, though body's torn. By shells that flew in Flanders.

Who's going to place the bloom above the dead? Full twice a soldier's share? Whose part was only just to wait? Till shoke had cleared away—Till within the open gate? And then wait in prayer!

The muffled drums sad roll has beat The soldier's last tattoo; No more on life's parade hall mee. That brave and fallen few. On Fame's eternal camping ground Their silent tents are spread, And Glory guards with solemn round The bivouac of the dead.

For what the life is choppy And seeks a soldier's doom 'Tis written in the poppy His life again shall bloom.

That these dead shall not have died in vain.

My attention has been called by several to the noisy audience in the high school at the Shakespeare plays last week. And the chief offenders seem to be the students, for whom the plays were especially given. The acoustics of the high school auditorium are bad enough without having voices about making comments when actors are trying to speak.

The Federal Council of Churches is sponsoring a plan to have all church bells rung at 11:02 o'clock on Armistice, right after the two minutes of silence period at 11:00 o'clock. Quite a good idea.

Mayor Sisto told village Board members the other night that people doing work for the village should present bills monthly. This seems a wise observation. Some merchants present bills for services three or four months old. This does not seem a smart way of doing business and may be a reason why a system of lachadaisical business methods is making some merchants so hard up.

The election workers don't work all day election day. At least that is my observation after looking at one of the tables they use, for carved on it are several tit-tat-toe games we used to play as kids. Now, maybe the election workers are not responsible for those marks on the tables, but it sure looks mighty suspicious, especially in the court house district. That's All.

Village Board Talks Taxes, Audits Bills

Few items were discussed at the monthly meeting of the Addison Village Board Monday night. Protest against outside bakers selling merchandise from door to door were heard and the Village Attorney will be asked to determine the legality of this action. The present village charter states "meat, fish, fruits and farm produce may be sold within the village."

Village Attorney Charles Salerno gave an opinion relative to a veteran investing pension money in a home, selling that home and investing in another and declaring the amount of exemption from taxes equal to the pension on the second property. Under a ruling of the Attorney General, the second property is exempt up to the amount of the original pension, not to exceed a sum of $5,000.

The subject of taxes was discussed and Mayor Sisto said the village is being run cheaper now than at any time in the past 20 years. Forrest Perry was appointed special police officer for the Addison High School.

Assistant Fire Chief Walter Aldrich appeared before the board relative to repairing a fire hose nozzle and asking the board to require nozzles owned by each company to be left on the respective company trucks.

Bills audited and ordered paid were: Mrs. Mary Hibbard for cleaning jail, $2.50; lighting, $294.31; James Barkalow, $4.44; Forrest Herrington, repairs to P. O. car, $3.00; E. O. Fritz gas, $1.44; and also $5.47. Bi-Lateral Home Company, two 50 foot pieces of hose, $130; Mrs. E. C. Hill, registrar of vital statistics, $48.50 and F. S. Whitmore, broom, $1.25.

Mayor Sisto brought out that many bills were over one month old and made a plea that those doing business with the village present bills monthly and those selling gasoline, deduct the tax.

CHAPTER CHATTER

Considerable interest is being shown in the vicinity of Addison concerning the purchasing of hay for winter feeding. It has been thought of many that it would be necessary for a large number of farmers to purchase hay out of the county where due to the shortage of hay in the farm countries affected by drought including Steuben, the demand would be great and the price excessive.

The Agricultural Department of the Addison High School has made inquiries regarding this situation and find that there is considerable hay for sale in the vicinity of Addison at a price ranging from $12 to $18 per ton. This hay ranges from ordinary feeding hay to good quality. It would seem that it would be better to buy hay locally whenever possible. The price may be less, the buyer can examine the hay and determine its quality and in most cases he knows the type of hay produced on that farm.

Many people who have a hay storage are considering the feeding of straw, corn, stover, corn stalks and other forms of roughage. It has been shown by experiments that a feeding of this type of roughage once each day will provide the cows with part of the nutrients required.

Small to eat the more about roughage. Many farmers have been misled by the more common practice of mixing this material with water and then sprinkling this mixture over the roughage. This same material will often cause cows to eat poor quality and unpalatable roughage which they might otherwise waste. When used in this way one mow of roughage is worth as much as a ton of good roughage and will frequently furnish the amount of nutrients to feed from two to three pounds per cow daily. This is a laxative in effect and must be used with care.

Frequently questions are asked concerning corn and cob meal. When fed in a grain mixture it is already reasonably bulky and cob meal may be practically equal weight of ground corn in feeding value. If the cost of grinding ear corn into corn-cob meal is less than the cost of shelling the corn and then grinding it, it is better to use the corn-cob meal.

Methods of comparing feeds frequently offered by feed salesmen and promoters who claim that the feeds treated become more effective and that normal production may be maintained and even increased at greatly reduced feed costs. Experiments conducted in the United States and Canada definitely showed that no saving in feed resulted from three of the processes. In Canadian trials it was found that fermentation of roughage resulted in a loss of 20 per cent of the protein and 12 per cent of the carbohydrates.

Armistice Day Means Joy and Home to Addison Service Men

"What were you doing the first Armistice Day?" is the question asked of several ex-service men of this vicinity last year. Thirteen men of this community who served in the war in various capacities were interviewed at that time.

Hubert Orr, who served in the 10th Engineers and saw service in many parts of France from the northern to the southern border as the band was in many places.

His chief recollections of the first Armistice Day included two outstanding facts, the first that the band played all day and night when the Armistice was announced, and secondly, he did not know where he was. The second fact can be explained by stating the band was put in a truck, started to a community to play and at the time did not know the name of the community which was some place near Bordeaux.

Hubert Orr enlisted in the engineers in Watertown and was sent to France. He played an alto horn for about a year the band had played these everywhere and on every occasion. Finally a New York wealthy woman heard of their plight and sent music and instruments. He left Brest, France January 15, 1919 on the U. S. S. New Jersey and was mustered out at Camp Upton February 1. When his ship came into port on this side, one of the ships to greet his ship was the U. S. S. Michigan on which Clare Chart was a seaman.

Seaman Chart was a musician on the U. S. S. Michigan and remembers that the ship was on patrol duty in the north Atlantic waters, in the vicinity of Virginia when the news of the real Armistice arrived about noon of November 11, 1918. The band, of which he was a member, hastily gathered on deck, played several patriotic pieces to cheer the crew on and also played "The Star Spangled Banner". They were immediately disciplined by ships officers for playing the national anthem without a proper occasion. Fellows on the ship were glad of the news because it meant home, but before they were mustered out they made three trips across the Atlantic once as a convoy for troops and two trips as a converted transport. This continued until August 19, 1919 when he was given his discharge at Portsmouth, Virginia.

Thomas Grandon, Boson's Mate Thomas Grandon was aboard the U. S. S. Arkansas, a battleship of the Sixth Squadron of the Grand Fleet in European waters. These were dangerous waters, what with mines and submarines and pocket battleships of the German Navy always a menace, and the wireless to the ship stating the Armistice had been signed relieved several months of tension. All members of the crew gathered on deck and cheered loud and long. They started for home and left Brest in time to be in New York for a review by President Woodrow Wilson and Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels.

Russell Allen, Russell Allen was in a sector of France which did not find out the Armistice had been signed until four or five days after that historic event had been completed. He was somewhere between St. Mihiel and Verdun with the 310th Signal Battalion of the 35th Division. His group had been up front on the fighting sector for several days and had been sent to the rear for a rest and it was in this rest area that the fellows there when the Armistice was signed.

The fellows there were quite happy over the news for it means they would not have to go "up there" again. The division was sent home but Russell Allen was sent into Germany with the Signal Corps until June of 1919 when he sailed from St. Lazare on the S. S. Beaufort, a transport ship and was mustered out at Camp Upton August 9, 1919.

William Pepper, The end of a reign as mess sergeant was the vision of William E. Pepper when the Armistice was signed 21 years ago. He was located in Bristol, Pa., near Philadelphia where his unit, the 312th Infantry had been detailed to guard the Cramp Ship Yards. The ship yards at that time were working on government contracts and to prevent sabotage and spies, the infantry unit was detailed there. There were 250 men in the outfit. The first indication Company C had was when whistles began to blow. When it was announced that the Armistice had been signed, soldiers in the company went berserk and disobeyed orders and discipline was at a standstill for several hours. The company stayed at the yards another month and then went to Camp Dix to be discharged. Mr. Pepper states his fellow soldiers were happy and excited throughout the day when they heard the news and he can well remember it.

Stacy Newman, An airplane distributing pamphlets over the railroad station of Tours in France was the first inkling that Stacy Newman had that something unusual was happening. He was on a railroad train enroute from Argonne to Angoulême to attend a school for auto mechanics. His outfit was the 73rd Railroad Artillery.

At Tours they saw a plane over the station dropping pamphlets and the people shouting "Finish la guerre, finish la guerre!" They realized that this meant war is finished. Pollus and French girls cheered with them, laughed with them and danced with them over the glad news. Bands were out

Armistice Day Prayers In Church of Redeemer, Public Is Invited

Armistice Day this year will be observed by the Church of the Redeemer, not as a festival but as a day of corporate penitence for the sins of the world, our own as well as those of others, that have made the present war possible; and of determination that the outcome of this war, be it long or short, shall be a genuine peace, and not simply another armistice. At 8 o'clock in the morning there will be a Requiem celebration for all those who have lost their lives in war. From 9 until 4 a continuous chain of prayer for the peace of the world. Appropriate devotional literature will be on hand. The public is invited to visit the church during the day and join in the silent prayer.

AHS SENIORS ACTIVE

Seniors increased their fund for Washington again on Saturday when they held a bake and food sale in the Harry Lafkas store. Many items of cookies, cakes, pies, and home baked articles were sold at a good profit to the class, inasmuch as the materials were solicited from parents and other class well-wishers. The next big event on the class schedule will be the Senior play in December.

Dairy League Pres. Sexauer Here Nov. 22

Dairymen's League officials of this vicinity are planning two active days beginning Tuesday, November 21 and continuing through November 22.

The first meeting will be a meeting of the Tioga-Steuben District delegates and associate delegates. This will be in the form of a dinner meeting to be held in the Addison Grange Hall. The meeting will get under way at 10 o'clock and continue through the day. Executive directors Leon A. Chapin, J. A. Coulter and Ernest C. Strobeck will be the speakers and preside at the various sessions throughout the day. The meeting is scheduled as a special meeting. There will be discussions of problems and policies.

The Wednesday session will be held in the Addison High School auditorium and all milk producers and the general public are invited and urged to be present. President Fred Sexauer will be present, also first vice president Henry H. Rathbone who will speak on the forces which must be met by cooperating farmers.

Skaneateles—H. Townsend Yardly bought an ice cream cake in Syracuse and sent $11 postage to have the wedding anniversary cake delivered to his wife in Miami Florida by airplane.

playing joyful tunes. The trip continued after quite some time and on December 13, 1918 the outfit left Brest on the S. S. Mongolian for a 22 day trip home. The outfit was only in France four months and two more weeks of war would have brought the unit to the front.

Despite the fact he was in the United States, word of the Armistice did not reach Pvt. Benona F. Short until four days after it had been signed and then came only through word from the folks back home. Private Short was in the Field Artillery Replacement Depot at Camp Jackson, North Carolina. This outfit provided men for the various artillery regiments which were being depleted by battle casualties. The men had been trained in all phases of artillery work so that they could take their place in any unit in France. Word came for the men to get ready to embark for France. Valuable jewelry and keepsakes were sent home, a railroad train was on the siding and the men had instructions to pack. They packed at night and the next morning, which was November 11, 1918 were put to doing police work about the barracks and tending lawns. They knew something had happened at the last minute to save them from going to France but heard only rumors, which they could not believe. Two days before the armistice many of their friends had moved out and left for French battlefields.

The men knew something serious had happened but could not believe it was an armistice or the end of the war. This policing of grounds, tending lawns and the like continued for two months and about the first of February, 1919 the regiment was mustered out.

Men and Missions Fellowship Dinner

The men of the town of Addison are invited to take advantage of the opportunity afforded them for the evening of fellowship and inspiration on Tuesday Nov. 14th in the Methodist Church.

The Ladies of the Methodist Church will serve a dinner to the men of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist Churches and all others who would like to come. Men of other faiths and of no particular faith are urged to come.

A very strong and outstandingly interesting program has been arranged by Rev. Axtell and Rev. Johns. We are to have a sound motion picture on the subject "Touching The Untouchables", a picture of work in India. In addition to this we are most fortunate to have as our guest speaker, Dr. William Axling, who for a number of years has been the outstanding Christian Statesman of Japan representing the Baptist denomination there, but upholding the banner of Mission work there for all denominations.

Dr. Axling has been released by the Mission Board for a very limited time to the State of New York to appear for speaking engagements. This will be his first appearance in New York State as he is coming to us from Lincoln, Nebraska. It is a most fortunate coincidence that he is taking the Erie R. R. train from Chicago to Binghamton and for that reason it is possible for us to have him with us in Addison as he will arrive in town the afternoon of the 14th on his way to Binghamton and Syracuse.

It is our desire that as many persons as possible be able to hear this able authority on Japan speak, therefore the ministers of this town are urging all women and men who are not at the dinner to come to the Methodist Church around 7:30 P. M. to enjoy the program of the evening.

Farm Bureau Committeemen Organize For Member Canvass

Optimism prevailed at the meetings held at Canisteo and Bath Thursday and Friday evenings which launched, in the opinion of farm bureau officers, the most successful membership campaign of the bureau's history. They point to the record of recent years with a gain from nine hundred cooperators in 1932 to over twelve hundred in 1939 as evidence that the farm bureau is gaining in popularity in Steuben County.

Leon Dennis of Canisteo, vice-chairman of the executive committee, presided Thursday evening and Clair Bennett, prominent Howard farmer, was chairman of the Bath session. At both meetings William Kneppshild of Greenwood talked on Arabia.

Ray Brown Makes County 4-H Awards at Bath

The first annual 4-H Club Leaders Recognition Banquet was held Wednesday evening in Bath Grange Hall, with attendance of 89 4-H Club leaders, husbands, wives and friends.

After a fine meal, served by the women of the Bath Grange, a highly entertaining and interesting program was given under the direction of Carl Wellington, president of the Farm and Home Bureau and 4-H Club Association, who acted as toastmaster.

The program included a word of welcome by Harlo M. Atherton, of Addison, chairman of the 4-H Club Executive Committee of Steuben County, with a response from Mrs. Charles Kilmer, local leader from Woodhull, who represented the local leaders of the county. After the introduction of leaders and guests by Leon W. Taylor, county club agent, the group heard Prof. Mark Entorf, department of family life at Cornell University. Prof. Entorf gave a real word of encouragement to the leaders, bringing out the fact that many advantages, both educational and otherwise, were gained by 4-H Club members through their local club and project activities which statistics and records never could show.

Prof. Entorf, who is an eminent psychologist, brought an entirely new slant to the leaders regarding their activities and problems which arise in dealing with 4-H Club boys and girls.

Ray S. Brown, president of the Addison National Bank and Steuben County "key banker," presented silver leaders' pins and certificates to each leader and assistant who had completed a year or more of 4-H Club leadership. After a few final announcements the program officially closed with the 4-H Club Pledge.

Steuben Dairymen Study Feed Cost

Anticipating a record attendance, the Bath Municipal Hall has been engaged for the third annual Dairy Cattle Feeding School which will be in session through Tuesday and Wednesday, November 14 and 15.

With a one hundred percent gain in attendance last year as compared to the previous session, the dairy cattle feeding school has become a major event in the winter program of the Steuben County Farm Bureau.

List Subjects Discussed The opening session considers the ability of the dairy cow to use large quantities of roughage, is followed by the topic, Raising Calves and Heifers. The subjects listed for the afternoon are Needs for Proteins, Fats, Minerals and Vitamins and the sources of these elements and the importance of Hay, Silage and Pasture. Getting the Most for the Feed Dollar is the topic of the opening session of the second day followed by a discussion of Making Up the Grain Mixture. The afternoon of November 15 will be devoted to Practices of Feeding, with the records of the sixty thousand cows enrolled in the dairy herd improvement associations of New York state as the basis.

Hay Show A Feature Not only because it is the basis of cattle feeding but also because one hundred sixty thousand acres are in meadow, hay is a major crop in Steuben county.

There are to be classes for 1st cutting alfalfa; 2nd and 3rd cutting alfalfa; clover; alfalfa and timothy mixed; alfalfa, clover and grasses mixed; clover and grasses mixed; and timothy hay, seven divisions for which ribbons and prizes will be awarded the winners. Each entry is to be a three or four pound sample, is to be brought to the show before noon November 14.

Farm Bureau Picks Mike Kane As Committeeman

Michael Kane has been added to the list of Farm Bureau Committeemen for Steuben County according to an announcement made at a meeting of committeemen held in Bath Friday night. With Mr. Kane at the meeting representing Addison and vicinity were, Joseph and Francis Kane, Sheldon Stewart and Clifford Rounds with Carl Carpenter of Woodhull.

There was an informal musical program and a speech by A. Kneppshild of Greenwood, world traveler and lecturer. He showed slides of various places he has visited and had articles of Arabia and other Asiatic countries to show. He was formerly employed as engineer in charge of oil production equipment in various countries of the world. He advised his listeners to visit South America rather than Europe for beauty.

He also pointed out that with all her faults, America is still a land where liberty means something more than a word.

County Agent William Stempfle spoke on the membership drive which is now under way. He mentioned there are 123 members in the county and the Bureau membership is growing owing to better planning of programs and the increased knowledge people have of the uses of the bureau. He pointed out that Steuben leads in bull associations and secured one-eighth of line allotted to state and one-fourth of seed under conservation program, showing the activity of the farmers here.

Bull Group Holds Fourth Annual Meet

Steuben's premier cooperative bull association holds its fourth annual meeting at the home of A. H. Lyke of Howard the evening of Friday, November 10, to inventory its livestock and to make plans for the future conduct of the group.

The association is famed not only because it was the first but also because it has proven a living sire, Fobes Sir Calantha, that transmits high production.

Daughters of this great sire, who would long since have gone to the block except for the fact that he was owned by a bull ring rather than an individual dairyman, have produced an average of sixty-four pounds of butterfat better than their dams.

At the same time the association records detected two bulls to be transmitters of low production and these were discarded. In its short life time, the bulls of the ring have sired approximately six hundred calves. More than two hundred cows are owned.

Members of the group are I. J. Calkins, Clair, Bert and George Bennett, S. H. Lyke and Sons, Kenneth Mattoon and George Clymo, all of Howard and vicinity.

"LUCKY SQUIRREL"

For weeks he's been storing up for winter. He won't have to work now for months. . . .

What a lucky break it would be for us if we could lay up enough electricity to meet the increased needs of winter. But electricity cannot be stored economically for future use. A certain percentage is lost in the mere course of transmission from the power plant to your home or place of business. So we must manufacture our product constantly and distribute it on the instant as our customers require.

This means that our power system must be large enough to supply the greatest amount of electricity which may be required—whether for increased lighting on winter's dark days and long nights, or for the added needs of a big radio evening of special news and speeches—for one factory's increased production, or for the seasonal speeding up of a whole local industry. Full equipment and the skilled engineers and operators to run it must be in constant readiness at all times.

York Volunteers, enlisting for service in the War of the Rebellion. He enlisted in August 1864 and served at Petersburg, Hatchers Run, in the White Oak Ridge, Hexford Raid, Five Forks and Appomattox. His discharge was dated September 11, 1865. He was wounded in the stomach and was in a government hospital for treatment.

He returned to Addison and became one of the charter members of W. W. Angle Post, Grand Army of the Republic and was its sole survivor for many years. Three years ago he presided over the annual meeting of the Post American Legion, the documents and records of Angle Post to keep for posterity.

Mr. Albee had a long and colorful career after returning from the war. He became an employee and helped construct the old Goodyear Railroad, under Platt & Baker, which later became the Buffalo and Susquehanna and is now the Baltimore & Ohio. He was employed there over 25 years. For many years he was in charge of construction.

During the flood of 1889, when he lived on Cleveland Street, a railroad trestle became loosened and was carried down to the rear of the Albee property and when he awakened in the morning, part of the bridge was on one side of his house and the bridge on the other. Friends used to kid him about the bridges coming to him for repairs.

He worked as a teamster at one time and narrowly escaped being thrown into the Canisteo River when the bridge over Main Street collapsed in 1871. His team had just started to go on the bridge when it crashed. He drew lumber for several vicinity lumbermen.

Upon leaving his work on the railroad he became a carpenter and was employed on many local buildings. At one time he engaged in the contracting business and built many homes in the north end of Corning.

He was supervisor of construction on the Village Hall under Mayor William E. Barron and also was a carpenter on the Methodist Church.

Mr. Albee has been active to within a few months ago, attending a Reunion of the Blue and Gray at Gettysburg in the summer of 1935 and only recently attended a dinner of the Advertising Club. He has only been confined to bed eight weeks.

Mr. Albee was a member of the Methodist Church and of the Blakeslee Sunday School Class. Legions conferred upon him an honorary membership.

He has been making his home for the past several years with Mr. and Mrs. George Kingsley, South Street.

The survivors include two granddaughters, Margaret and Jean Albee and a daughter in law, Mrs. Edith Albee of Upper Derby, Pa., and several nieces and nephews including James Coon of Freeman, Lewis Albee of Galeton and Burr Albee of Rochester.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock with members of the American Legion providing a military funeral. The

Erie Magazine Has Picture of Local Man

The November issue of the Erie Magazine has a picture which will be of interest to Addisonites. The picture was taken in 1900 by Frank Ginnane, now of Buffalo. It was taken when he was operator at station IX. The picture shows an Erie caboose, one of the smaller ones, and in front of it are Edward Walton, "Stikes" Bennett and a third man, unidentified in the picture. The men were part of the crew of a train on the Elmira-Addison run at that time. Mr. Ginnane is now retired and living in Buffalo. He is a frequent visitor to Addison and the Advertiser staff.

AHS Armistice Program Held; Cate is Speaker

Tribute to the American Legion and a plea for good leadership training were voiced to Addison High School students by Dr. Bert C. Cate, headmaster of Cook Academy at an Armistice program given in assembly Wednesday afternoon. Williams-Greengrass Post American Legion was in charge of the program which takes the place of the regular Armistice Day program in school. There will be no assembly Friday.

Commander John W. Russ of the local post opened the meeting by pointing out that the Legion was trying to promote ideals of Americanism and took this opportunity of meeting with the students. He called upon Scout James Coon who led in the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag.

Dr. Amos G. Stiker presented the speakers by saying that the Legion went to war to fight for the rights of the boys and girls who would make up future generations. It is up to the boys and girls, he told them, to preserve and protect and pass on the ideals they have received. Our distinguished speaker will point out to you some of these ideals and I take pleasure in presenting Dr. Bert Cate.

Dr. Cate said, "It is heavenly to be alive and the men who make up the American Legion fought for the right and are now fighting for peace under inspired leadership. It is up to you to learn what is right. Character training is also necessary. Reputation is what your neighbors think of you but character is what you are. You must develop your own sense of responsibility. Peace will come from your leadership. Dictatorships come when people become so soft they need an iron hand. And world leadership is coming to America and it will be yours."

"Legion men had something pounded into them by war which they will never forget. It is the most hopeful organization for peace in the United States today. Those men came back from war two years out of date, many without homes, some without jobs and for what? Should the present generation go to war, they will assure the men going across here that they will have secure jobs when they return."

"Are we losing faith in the things of our fathers? We are afraid of work and work made this country. And don't lose your Christian principles."

"Channing Pollock said, 'soul erosion and not soil erosion is what is the trouble with America. We need a return to the ideals of our forefathers. Take pride in your work and thank God you are alive, thank God you are an American.'"

"Taps" was blown by Clara Chart after a period of silence in memory of the dead. The assembly closed with the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner." Those on the stage in addition to those mentioned were: Legionnaires Thomas Grandon, William E. Newman, Mr. Gladstone, and County Commander Elmer Bovee, Stanley Ackerson and Robert Hill of Legion Boys' State.

TYPING HELPS Condensed from an article on typing, an aid for students by Angelo Patri, as copied from the Buffalo Evening News:

"Children with faulty vision and faulty coordinations which yield slowly to treatment... It is for such children that typewriters should be used."

"Teach them to use the typewriter. Typewriting is useful to all who write to any extent. 'Come poor spellers are helped by the use of the typewriter.'"

"Typing demands a touch for each letter, and the mind calls that letter by name, and helps the hands put it in place."

"A father or mother on the lookout for a second-hand machine for their special needs can get one and every school can at least have one. Even one would help in the training of children where writing powers are defeated by poor coordination."

A representative of Mason Typewriter Exchange calls in Addison every week, usually on Wednesdays. Calls for Mr. Mason may be left at this office or phone Addison 58-R.
